Park City Cares Foundation Empowers Local Education with $6,500 in Contributions

MERRILL, WISC. – The Park City Cares Foundation is proud to announce donations totaling $6,500, reinforcing its commitment to education and community support. This includes $5,000 for local schools and $1,500 for scholarships, aligning with the Foundation's mission of enhancing communities through financial literacy and education.

The Rhinelander Fab Lab has been generously gifted $800 to acquire a new industrial garment press, a crucial upgrade from their aging press from the early 2000s, poised to revolutionize their production capabilities for greater efficiency and productivity.

The Merrill Fab Lab has obtained $2,250 for a portable CNC machine, designed for use in multiple schools. This addition complements the high school's larger CNC machine and offers younger students valuable exposure and hands-on experience, fostering their tech skills.

Similarly, the Tomahawk Fab Lab was granted $1,950 for a heat press, enabling custom T-shirt production. They intend to sell these shirts to raise funds for more equipment and upgrades. Additionally, the lab is developing an online ordering system for 2024, enhancing efficiency and business prospects.

Jack Mikunda, President of the Park City Cares Foundation, expressed his heartfelt enthusiasm for these impactful donations: "We are immensely proud to support our local schools and students by providing resources that enhance their access to cutting-edge technologies. This aligns seamlessly with our mission to foster financial literacy and educational growth within our communities."

The Park City Cares Foundation remains dedicated to supporting the communities it serves through financial contributions and the dedication of volunteer hours from Foundation members and community partners. As the Foundation continues to grow, it looks forward to expanding its positive impact.
